Tomas: The practice of being in the now is always a good place to be, from where you can review what's gone before and anticipate in part what may come along, but for the most part your anticipations are mere hopes and dreams and wishes without being that keen sense of foresight that the Master enjoyed in his mortal existence. The promise is that in time in your evolution you will gain, acquire, a perception of what's to come with a certain degree of acuity.

I'd like to help you to discern where that ability comes from. In truth it comes from the First Source and Center who knows the end from the beginning. As you develop your association with the infinite God your vantage point is extended and expanded to offer up your mind and soul for those impressions that might lend your consciousness to a greater understanding of what can come to pass, not based on your wisdom or calculations of a logical outcome, but based on the glimpses of eternal truth that come to you from the source of your being.

The knowledge you have gained socially that constitutes the brain waves, the mental arena, the place where the Mystery Monitor maintains its mental connection with mortality, is said to be a point in the deep mind which will provide you with glimpses of truth and insights that are then assimilated by your subconscious and conscious minds and allowed to become a part of your superconscious composition; giving yourself permission to allow a glimpse of potential to rise up from your source as if you were in a fish tank observing the bubbles of spiritual reality rise to the surface of your mind. In these bubbles are the impetus and guidance for your spirit life. You can perceive the future through these gifts of insight that arise as a preview of things to come. At this point in your evolution they are infrequent, but in due course your communication with your Indwelling Adjuster will be such that your perceptions will be more wholeheartedly embraced by you, for you will have had an opportunity to play with your spirit awareness and familiarize yourself with your spirit essence such that you will begin to have faith in yourself because of your affiliation with the divine spark. This is certainly a part of the cooperative, co-creative effort, but it is another angle, another dimension, another appreciation for the relationship that is indicative of that which is to come for you as well as for all of humanity en route to its ascension.

You know about the factor that when you have certain perceptions or insights or thoughts that may provoke anxiety or fear, your tendency is to pretend they didn't cross your mind or wish them away. This is operating against the flow, the potential, offered you by divinity. In assessing, therefore, your skills and abilities in your own composition, overlook not those spiritual skills and acquirements of such a nature as to expand your console of operation and adapt a new dimension of truth, beauty, and goodness to that portfolio of qualities that you offer your arena, indeed, your very existence.

The rewards extend beyond your own knowing to fuel the growth of the Supreme which realizes, contains, harmonizes, assimilates, and utilizes all of those realities which you help create, having put your faith in that which you understand to be the God of your indwelling. How marvelous is this cosmic design affording you the opportunity to grow into yourself in such a way as to keep your psyche stable even as it is embellished and expanded through association with light.
